GEN. HARRISON'S CLAIMS.

Gen. Harrison says that he considers himself on trial before the American people for his military conduct. Let no voter be led into his support by this shallow artifice. The charges alleged against his military conduct are brought forward to show his want of foresight firmness and magnanimity, and consequently his incapacity to conduct the affairs of a great and growing nation—a nation that should be too proud of its greatness to place a mere automaton at its head, and too careful of its welfare to trust it as a reward to a military man, without regard to his qualifications.

Gen. Harrison has no reason to complain of not being sufficiently rewarded for his military services; for although the people have frequently refused to grant his repeated and exorbitant demands upon their gratitude, he has craved and received appointments to offices which might have been filled with able men, upon the emoluments of which he has lived from his boyhood, and is still living.

If, then, there be no personal considerations that should influence a vote in favor of Gen. Harrison, every voter should consider attentively the measures that his supporters are endeavoring to carry out. First, they desire to re-charter a national bank; and as General Harrison has lately declared himself in favor of the present banking system, if he should be elected, we may expect to see the bank scene of the past few years re-enacted—the bubble will be inflated; expansion, contraction, suspension and failure will follow in rapid succession; and those who do not consent to enter into the speculative and gambling mania which will be engendered, will become the prey of the cunning and dishonest bankers, who will finally become lords of the land, with the laboring class for their tenants. Next to a bank come a high tariff, internal improvements by the general government, a great national debt, and increased taxes to pay the interest, without the ability or hope of ever paying the principal. These are a few of the leading measures of the federal whig party, from which they attempt to divert public attention by directing it to men and to gewgaw shows and bacchanalian festivities. We repeat, let every one, who designs voting for Gen. Harrison, consider attentively the consequences, before he casts his vote.

GEN. HARRISON'S INFIRMITY.

Although the federal prints and Gen. Harrison himself continually deny the charge that he is physically as well as mentally incapacitated for the Presidency, facts contradict their assertions and substantiate the charge. The Hillsborough Gazette says that while there, some days since, Gen. Harrison being too weak to shake hands with the people, who would not be satisfied with an apology, Gov. Metcalf of Kentucky was brought forward in his stead, with whom they shook hands to their content, supposing him to be Gen. Harrison.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.—Insurrectionary movements took place in Paris on the 10th of September, which caused much alarm; but the troops soon suppressed them. All was quiet at the last dates; notwithstanding which, apprehensions of insurrection still existed. The whole working population is said to be discontented and predisposed to revolt.

There is an increased bad feeling of the French people towards England.
